Jeddah Old And New

Synopsis

Jeddah: 'Bride of the Red Sea'. This is a cosmopolitan city, ancient and modern hub, unique seat of civilisation and meeting point for millions of pilgrims. It is a city without compare. At its core lies a network of old merchant houses, mosques, markets and shaded walkways. Its history is etched on every balcony, dome and minaret. But surrounding the ancient city is a strikingly modern metropolis, built with grace and vision. This book evokes the dual character of the city, capturing in beautiful photographs the essence of its ancient and modern charm. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

James Buchan is a novelist and journalist and the grandson of John Buchan. --This text refers to an out of print or unavailable edition of this title.

Now I have this book lying around at home with my grandfather's large collection of fascinating books...old and new. I recently opened it up and was amazed at how beautifully Jedda was described and portrayed. See I live in Jedda...seeing how the editors put together the book so truthfully, I thought 'finally a book that shows a city/country as it's true self'. I recommend this book to anyone who wants to look into Arabian life.
