Customer Reviews

Brendan Howlin is a Druid grade member of the order of Bards, Ovates and Druids (OBOD). He has been a Senior International Tutor for Bards and Ovates for 14 years, and Science Correspondent for Touchstone, the journal of OBOD for 14 years. He is also co-founder of Surrey Druid Grove. He lives in Guildford, UK.

This is the second book on the subject of being a Druid in the modern world and it does not disappoint. The first book covered how to look for and be a part of nature in today's world, looking outward from yourself towards the world. This book covers the opposite side of things in that it makes you look inward on yourself and how you behave and interact with others. It makes you think how much of what you do is based on your family, surroundings, upbringing etc...A very good book and one that I would recommend to others.
